

Althea Gonzalez is an experienced bilingual and bicultural professional providing consultation, training, and technical assistance to nonprofits and philanthropic institutions across the U.S. She also supports organizations as a workshop facilitator providing courses on capacity-building topics such as board development, multiculturalism, and leadership. As an independent consultant and nonprofit leader for over 20 years, Althea has excelled in program management, nonprofit capacity building, organizational development, strategic planning, and creating culturally competent organizations. She is passionate about working in concert with nonprofit leaders to take their organization to the next level. She holds an M.A. in Adult Education, specializing in Training & Development, from NC State University and a B.A. from the University of Chicago.